

Privacy policy

1. Once accepting this Agreement, the Company will establish a System account in your name and ownership, stemming from the applicable data you provided in the application process, and modified periodically for accuracy, when ordered by the Company. It is your responsibility to check that all information submitted to our Company is accurate, true, and complete. If it is found that false or misleading details were given, it will be deemed as a violation which will result in a prompt suspension of all activities in the said account or its termination.

2. You approve your permission that the instant we have finished the authentication of your identity by the procedure used by said Company, we then are ordered to convey you as a heir of the relevant holding account created by the financial organization which the Company depends upon to record Collateral funds associated to you, in the sums which tally a total balance documented in your account in the System, plus we could also transmit the financial services firm those identification facts which you provided us.

3. After your account is made, the Company will create a secret personal identification encryption for you (hereafter known as the "Access Code") to access the account on the Internet. You hereby confirm that the responsibility to protect this Access Code falls on you alone. You also agree to abandon all claims versus the Company associated with the use of this Access Code in a prohibited manner.

4. Said Company regards the privacy of its Clients highly important and continues to secure any data concerning them which they received. SpearGpt applies the most up-to-date technological and physical security procedures to process and protect the information on servers. Should you disagree with these methods we use, we request that you refrain from using our services. Your information is only to be used per our Privacy Policy. Nonetheless, approval of this Agreement is regarded as a permit for us to transmit marketing and promotional material, be it ours or that of any other third party that we have settled to offer these services.